BREED THEATER.

"Yale-Harvard Boat Race," Feature Motion Picture.

A picture of more than usual interest is the feature at the Breed theater for today and the balance of the week and is entitled Auntie at the Races, and is a romance of the Yale-Harvard race at New London, Conn, The stroke oar of the Harvard crew has a bewitching little sweetheart, who is anxious to attend the race at New London, but her father will not allow her to go except with a chaperone, so her lover arranges with his chum to represent a loving old aunt, and, securing the necessary outfit, appears at the girl's home, and introduces the masquerading chum as his aunt, who will gladly assume the duties of chaperone for this occasion. The father becomes more and more attracted by the chaperone, and makes violent love to her, which makes another knot in the tangled romantic skein. A villaineus plot is discovered, which consisted of abducting the stroke oar of the Harvard crew, and secreting him until after the races had been called off, so the rival Yale crew could win, as most of the betting was on Yale. The plan was thwarted, and all ends happily, while the fascinating pictures of the many interesting scenes around New London, and the boat houses, are delightfully familiar.

Records for Aeroplanes.

One can scarcely speak of the aerial journey of Charles K. Hamilton, from New York to Philadelphia and back, as an unqualified success, since an accident, of a kind which should have accident, of a kind which should have been foreseen and obviated, delayed his return; yet, though Curtiss, whose biplane he used, continues to hold the record for speed, and Paulhan that for continuous flight, Hamilton seems to have established American records for cross-country distance and dura-tion of flight, and possibly for aver-age speed per mile also. His was, moreover, a severe and dangerous test of an aeroplane's capacity, since his of an aeroplane's capacity, since his route lay over cities, open country and bedies of water, and at every other moment he must have met conflicting moment he must have met conflicting air currents; yet, maintaining an average height of about 250 feet, though at times he rose to a height of 1,500 feet he seems to have managed to "follow the wind, not fight it," and ride in safety to success.

If, however, one decides to classify Hamilton's voyage as rather interesting than important—and to say that is not to detract from the skill of the aviator or the enterprise of his the aviator or the enterprise of his backers, the New York Times and Philadelphia Ledger—one needs not besitate to sneak with enthusiasm of Philadelphia Ledger—one needs not besitate to speak with enthusiasm of Walter Brookins' achievement at Indianapolis, where, using a Wright biplane, he soared to a height of 4.384 1-2 feet, thus surpassing by a substantial distance the record for altitude, 4.165 feet, made by Paulhan at Los Angeles. Wilbur Wright expresses the conviction that "the next thing we shall hear of will be a mile-high ascent," and Brookins' perfermance considered, that seems no idle fancy. The pupils of the Wrights are still at Indianapolls, and Brookins is not the only daring and ambitious man in the group. We may hear of the mile-high record tonight. In any event it will undoubtedly be established soon.—Boston Transcript.

Back-to-the-Soil Colonies.

One difficulty with the back-to-thefarm movement, though perhaps not its chief one is that those whom it is designed particularly to benefit lack a working plan. They do not know how to go at it. Even assuming that a city man wants to go back to the soil and become a producer, how shall he go become a producer, how shall he go about it?

This question is answered by the National Farm Homes association, of which Gov. Hadley of Missouri is prestdent. Hadley has become one of the foremost of the back-to-the-farm agitators. Perhaps his organization is thinking primarily of the development of Missouri and the southwest: yet could its plan be carried out its benefits would extend far beyond that. Hadley and his associates propose to establish in sections of the southwest where land is cheap, colonies each of 32 families. Each family is to have 40 acres, and in the center of the group of 40-acre farms will be a central farm of 160 acres to belong to the organization and be operated as a model for the rest. Not one cent of capital will be necessary for one to take advantage of this opportunity to get back to the soil. Each farmer will be given ten years to pay for his plot of ground, which, fully equipped with buildings and machinery, will be furnshed him by the association. For the city man, to whom farming is as mysterious art, the central model farm will be ready always to suggest methods and indicate results.—Cleveland Plain Dealer. Plain Dealer.

A Poor Entertainment.

One of the daily papers of the state informed its readers last week that a certain church in its city was crowda certain church in its city was crowded the night before by men and women who witnessed a mock marriage in which all the participants were children, apparently under 12 years old. They were dressed to the part, the luckiess little boys in evening dress and the poor little girls cumbered with trains and all the rest of the finery which is supposed to accompany a fashionable wedding. In all some forty children were dragged into the entertainment and forced to occupy the center of the stage at a time when they ought to have been asleep, Aside the center of the stage at a time when they cught to have been asleep. Aside from the lack of taste in selecting a church as a place in which to parody a religious ceremony, it does not seem as if the interests of the children were properly safeguarded by their admiring parents. Certainly there must be forms of recreation better calculated for small boys and girls than the excitement of a mock wedding; and the sentiment that crowds a church to witness a performance of the sort is not one to be encouraged. Will the social committee which managed this entertainment follow it with a mock funeral?—The Courant.

Abe's Terms Accepted.

Abe's Terms Accepted.

One day recently Kin Hubbard, the originator of "Abe Martin," received a letter from the Loogootee (Ind.) Bible class for men asking his terms for a lecture, says The Indianapolis News. If there is anything Kin dotes on it is —lecturing! He much prefers it to having a leg amputated or joy-riding on a buzz saw. In replying to the letter Kin simply said his terms would be $1,000,000 a minute, provided the Bible class could get the Marine band to play while he was speaking.

Mr. Hubbard received a reply from D. M. Robbins of Loogootee, the president of the class. It was this:

Dear Mr. Hubbard—We have considered your favor of May 23 and have decided to engage you at your price decided to engage you at your price for ten minutes, provided we can get the band. Sincerely yours, Loogcotee Bible Class for Men. D. M. ROBBINS, President. —Chicago Inter Ocean.

POETRY. A SONG.

Composed by the British Soldiers, after the fight at Bunker Hill, June 17,

(This old British song is the preperty of Dr. W. S. C. Perkins of this city, with whose kind permission The Bulletin uses it on the 135th anniversary of the conflict. It will be interesting to our readers.)

It was on the seventeenth by brake of The Yankees did surprise us.

With their strong works they had thrown up.

To burn the town and drive us:

But soon we had an order come,

An order to defeat them:

Like rebeis stout they stood it out,

And thought we no er could beat them.

About the hour of twelve that day,
An order came for marching.
With three good fints and sixty
Founds,
Each man hop'd to discharge them.
We marched down to the long wharf,
Where boats were ready walting;
With expedition we embark'd,
Our ships kept cannonading.

And when our boats all filled were
With officers and soldiers,
With as good treops as England had.
To oppose who dare control us;
And when our boats all filled were,
We row'd in line of battle.
Where show'rs of balls like hall did fly.
Our cannon loud did rattle.

There was Cop's hill battery mean Charlestown.
Our twenty-fours they played.
And the three frigates in the atream.
That very well behaved:
The Glasgow frigate clear'd the shore.
All at the time of landing.
With her grape shot and cannon balls.
No Yankees e'er could stand them.

And when we landed on the shore.

We drew up all together:
The Yankees they all man's there.

works,
And thought we'd ne'er come there.
But soon they did perceive brave
Howe.
Braye Howe our bold commander,
With grenadiers, and infantry.
We made them to currender.

Cry'd boys fight on like thunder;
You soon will see the rebels flee,
With great amaze and wonder.
Now some lay bleeding on the ground.
And some full fast a running.
O'er hills and dales and mountains high,
Crying, sounds! brave Howe's coming.

They began to play on our left wing. Where Pegot he commanded;
But we return'd it back again.
With courage most undaunted.
To our grape shot and musket bells.
To which they were but strangers.
They thought to come in with awar in hand.
But soon they found their danger.

And when the works we get into,
And put them to the flight, sir.
Some of them did hide themselves,
And others died with fright, sir,
And then their works we get into,
Without great fear or danger.
The work they'd made so firm and strong:
The Yankees are great strangers.

But as for our artitlery.

They all behaved dinty?

For white their ammunition held.

We gave it to them plenty.

But our conductor he got broks.

For his misconduct, sure, sir.

The shot he sent for twelve pounds. Were made for twenty-four, sir.

There's some in Boston pleas'd to say
As we the field were taking.
We went to kill their countrymen.
While they their hay were making.
For such stout Whigs I never saw:
To hang them all I'd rather.
For making hay with musket-balls
And buck-shot mixed together. Brave Howe is so considerate.

As to prevent all danger:
He allows half a pint a day;
To rum we are no strangers.
Long may be live by lend and sea.
For he's beloved by many;
The name of Howe the Yankees dread.
We see it very plainly.

And now my song is at an end;
And to conclude my ditty.
It is the poor and ignorant.
And only them, I pity.
And as for their king John Hancock,
And Adams, If they're taken.
Their heads for signs shall hang up

Upon that hill call'd Bacon.
